Dates and duration (days)

The circuit, co-developed by Formula 1 circuit builder Hermann Tilke, has 12 bends and is just under three kilometers long. It offers ideal conditions for deepening the riding techniques required for everyday motorcycling.

With the most individual attention possible and a daily schedule perfectly tailored to training success, the Curve School offers optimal conditions for discussing and training topics such as eye-tracking, line selection, braking, seating position, and hanging-off technique.

The cornering school is aimed at all motorcyclists who want to work on their cornering technique and refine it further. The participants are divided into homogeneous groups (maximum 7 riders per group) and supervised by experienced instructors. The training starts in different parts of the track, which will be ridden by each group one after the other. For this purpose, we have the handling course, the circular track, and a large free track section at our disposal. Afterward, we go over the whole track in small groups to further practice what we have learned. The instructors show the right line and give valuable tips and suggestions. Freeriding is also on the program for the fast groups.

The training also offers excellent opportunities for sports riders and those with track experience to further improve their skills. In the sportier groups of the cornering school, the focus is particularly on vision and steering, seat position, line selection, and the hanging-off technique with the infamous grinding of the kneepad over the asphalt.
